The Alabama Election.

At the election in Alabama the other day, it is said in the news report, there was the largest vote ever cast. It is even reported that a large part of what the southern chivalry call the "damningers" voted. In view of this extraordinary fact there are several points about this election that are worthy of especial notice.

The "damningers" who voted, for the most part voted the Democratic ticket. It is probable that many of them in other parts of the south would be heard from as having voted on election day if this were the ticket they voted.

The way it happened in Alabama was that there were two Democratic tickets in the field, and neither side felt sure that its ticket could be elected without some "nigger" votes. Both tickets were white, both were Democratic, and, of course, the whole business was chivalry. It is reported in the news from Alabama that one of these chivalry announced to the other chivalry that any one who interfered with the "niggers" that wanted to vote its ticket would be shot, "By Gawd, sah!"

From the fact the Alabama cast the largest vote in her history is a fairly logical conclusion that the "damningers" were not interfered with to any extent.

The worthy gentlemen who are just now exercised with the fear of a "force" bill, Federal bayonets at the polls and "nigger" supremacy in the south have reason to view with alarm this development in southern politics. In the case of Alabama there has been a threat of force, if not an actual display of it, if the "damningers" were not allowed to vote. The "damningers" actually have voted. This would seem to constitute a dangerously radical tendency of things, with threats of all sorts of dire results, from what we hear from opponents of the "force" bill.

The two points in the case that are calculated to assuage anxiety are that the threats of violence came from southern chivalry and the "damningers" voted the Democratic ticket.

Adlai's War Record.

We are glad to find out how "General" Adlai Stevenson acquired his military title. Mr. Parker Gardner, a well known and highly respected farmer of Wabash, Ind., who resided in Illinois during the period of the drafts, made the following affidavit before a notary public:

"In the year 1862 I was a resident of Wilson township, DeWitt county, Illinois. At that time I was acquainted with Adlai E. Stevenson, Democratic candidate for Vice President, he being a resident of Bloomington, Ill. I stood in my own yard in Wilson township early in the summer of the year aforesaid and saw Stevenson and James Ewing, present partner of said Stevenson, come on horseback off the prairie and went to the residence of a Mr. Ellsworth, a neighbor, where he sold two revolvers—one for Ellsworth and the other for his son. Stevenson and Ewing then went across to the south side of Salt Creek, where there was a camp of the "Knights of the Golden Circle," and Stevenson there sold eighteen revolvers to members of the order. James Spratt, now living in the same county, informing me that he bought two revolvers himself, and that Stevenson was peddling the arm for the purpose of enabling men to resist the draft. Mr. Ellsworth at the same time informed me that his object in purchasing the revolvers was to arm himself and son against the draft officers, and that Stevenson so understood the purpose for which they were to be used.

"Parker Gardner.

"Subscribed and sworn to before me this 6th day of August, 1892.

OLIVER H. BOGUE,

Notary Public."

Representative Enloe, (Dem.) Tenn.,

inaugurated an investigation of the Pension Bureau as administered under Gen. Green B. Raum. Enloe has been proclaiming loud and long the rotten state of things he found there, and has gloried in bullying and browbeating all sorts of witnesses in the case, trying to get them to testify to substantiate his charges. The only thing developed in the investigation was the fact that Democratic Congressman had been using their Congressional privilege to get information from the Pension Bureau, which was sold to pension agents. Finally Mr. Enloe went into the House with his report, drank numerous cups of tea and started to make a speech. The Democratic House was so thoroughly disgusted with the whole thing that it declined to allow Enloe to finish his speech, and proceeded to other business without acting on the report, thus shelving the report and Enloe indefinitely.

Congressman Beckinridge, of Kentucky,

was elected orator of the Columbian Exposition under the belief that he regarded it as a National Exposition in the largest acceptance of the term. By his votes and by his speeches in congress he has declared that it is nothing of the kind, and that it is unconstitutional for congress to aid the enterprise. Nothing is plainer under such changed conditions than the duty of Mr. Beckinridge to decline the honor he has already accepted and allow some National man of broader public spirit to fill the place. Mr. Beckinridge could possibly say nothing upon the great occasion in keeping with the American idea of the exposition. It is simply, in Beckinridge's estimation, a great county fair in which people "over the lines" and in other states are invited to participate. Beckinridge would do well to turn the honor over to Congressman Fellows, of New York.

It must be cheerful news to Mr

Cleveland to know that Don M. Dickinson is to direct his campaign. When everything was going against him on the night of election in 1888 Mr. Dickinson tried to cheer up President Cleveland by urging him to "wait until we hear from Michigan." Cleveland waited and learned that Michigan had more than doubled its Republican majority. Mr. Dickinson has again heard from Michigan. The gerrymander he so carefully planned and pushed through the Democratic legislature a year ago has been knocked out as unconstitutional and the Democratic majority in the legislature has now been as much disabled as their gerrymander has been defeated. Dickinson is hearing more from Michigan than is comfortable this warm weather.

Democratic organs tell us: "The Democratic is the young man's party, the party of the future;" that "the Republican party is the party of the past." Democracy is at least smart in pointing to the future instead of the past. There is nothing it so much desires as to have its past record obliterated and forgotten. Having proved recreant to every trust in the hours of the Nation's peril, it may well pray for oblivion for its past, burn all bridges behind, and look only to the future. The Republican party has all the past and present and future, and challenges its enemies.

Speaking of the diabolical way in which the Republican party has "squandered the surplus," it is important to note that the interest-bearing debt of the United States has been reduced since the inauguration of President Harrison in the sum of over $275,000,000, and that the annual interest charge, which, when he was inaugurated, amounted to $34,578,459.80, was, on June 30, 1892, only $22,893,881.20, a decrease of $11,684,578.60, or about one-third.—N. Y. Tribune.

Don M. Dickinson has reconsidered

his determination to be a United States Senator from Michigan since the Supreme Court declared the Democratic gerrymander unconstitutional. He is now considering taking a place in Cleveland's Cabinet, in return for his pernicious activity at the Chicago convention. By next November he will be reconciled to accepting almost any stray job of statesmanship that can be had.

The Democrats are worried about the treasury surplus for fear that it will not hold out against the bills. It won't with another Democratic congress to pass rebel war claims. The committee on War Claims in the last House reported rebel claims against the government amounting to $70,000,000. The Democrats were, however, afraid to pass these bills just before election. They allowed them to go over until December.

Who believes that the United States would have gone along paying of its enormous debts, and building at the same time its immense manufactories, as during the past twenty-five years, without the aid of protection? There is no more prosperous people on the globe to-day than in the United States; then why turn aside for experiments, the folly of which has already been proved?

The Congressman from Texas who declared that "the Columbian Exposition was a Republican show" told the truth in one respect. Had it not been for the Republican party there would have been no "United States" to hold an exposition in 1893. The states might still have been here, but disunited and as hostile as any two separate nations upon the Western Hemisphere.

What nonsense it is to talk about a joint debate between President Harrison and Mr. Cleveland on the tariff issue! If Mr. Harrison cared to debate he would insist upon doing so with a man who knew something about the question, whereas Mr. Cleveland is on record as saying that he didn't know a blanked thing about it.

The Hon. Jerry Simpson is preparing to plunge into print in behalf of the People's party. He should dissuade himself. Smarter demagogues than he have leaped into the sea of printers' ink only to sink beneath its surface. Simpson should stick to his knitting. Winter is coming, when even statesmen will need socks.

If Andrew Carnegie and Mr. Frick

want to cultivate Democratic friendship they will at once cut down the wages of employees in the Homestead mills. The high prices of labor literally burst the Democratic Congressional committee wide open, and they concluded not to make public their discoveries just now.

Grover Cleveland vetoed 556 soldiers'

pensions, including the dependent pension bill. When old General Sickles raised his crutch in the Chicago convention and emphasized the assertion that "25,000 Democratic Union soldiers in New York would never vote for Grover Cleveland" he had reason for such statement.

Candidate Cleveland, since hearing

the result of the recent election in Alabama, has written a letter expressing his gratification at "seeing our colored citizens taking an active interest in political affairs." Well done, Grover. You pat the "colored citizens" on the back and trust Adlai to keep the rebel element in line.

The managers of the Cleveland campaign

are laying out a route of speech-making for Senator Hill. It is kind of the gentlemen to do so. First they laid out Hill himself and now they are laying out a route for him. To the Senator the last performance will probably be about as agreeable as the first was.

Stevenson will politic in four states,

viz.: Illinois, Indiana, New York, and North Carolina; but Cleveland will write letters adapted to all conditions in all the states. Correspondence solicited. Address, Gray Gables, Buzzard's Bay.

An Eastern free-trade contemporary says: "The Carter idea of a campaign is one of noise, torchlights and uniforms." Don't you be worrying. Republicans will give you all as much of "the campaign of education" as you can digest.

Cleveland doesn't use his excellent fishing sense in politics. He fishes for votes, as if Democrats and Mugwumps were all "suckers," but he would be ashamed to pull into Buzzard's Bay harbor with a string of suckers.

Candidate Cleveland is a man who always takes care of his health. He was exposed to a draft in the early days of the war, but escaped any evil consequences by hiring a substitute.

Somehow or other Jones-of-Binghamton

isn't paying the freight to any great extent this year. Possibly Jones has gone out of the shipping business, politically speaking.

During Cleveland's administration 524

pension bills were vetoed. During Harrison's administration no pension bills were vetoed and nearly 1,500 have been signed.

Mr. Cleveland's administration will be acceptable to the Democrats of Mississippi and South Carolina.

Mr. Harrison's record is likely to be approved by Democrats who went to the war themselves, or whose near relatives went. It is needless to say that it will be approved by all Republicans.

A Clear Case.

Say, wife, I met Sile Jinkins comin' down, With a load of hay on his way to town; An' he says to me, says he, "Jake Russ, It's this darn tariff that's bustin' us."

An' I says to him, says I: "Sile, why?" "Because," said he, "it makes things high."

"Prices you mean?" says I; an' he Nodded his nubb'n head at me.

"I've noticed it some myself," says I; "The price of pertaters is mighty high; An' up to date we ain't been struck."

Almighty much on our garden truck.

"An' our wheat an' our oats, it seems to me, Has been goin' off our hands right free; Their corn ain't slow; an' 'Silas, that hay Of your'n ain't losin' you much to-day."

"I reckon the tariff's doin' it, Sile; Givin' us prices in high-up style; Least ways them workmen livin' in town, Ain't doin' much to keep 'em down."

"If them there furnaces, mills, and sitch, Keeps on runnin' we will all git rich; Fer the fellers that works have got to eat, And we've got to furnish the bread and meat."

"The tariff's doin' it, of course it be, Puttin' up prices for you an' me, An' fur our children, when we are gone; Then Sile said nothin', but jis' druv on."
